

Special Schools

Hoosier Boys State holds Special Schools sessions throughout the week with guest instructors that specialize in those fields. Delegates will have the opportunity to choose which school they want to attend that might be of interest to them. Once they decide, they will attend that school for the rest of the week. Special Schools offered vary each year, but they could include the following:

Law

The School of Law will examine the process of becoming a Lawyer/Attorney, specific legal issues, case law, civil law, criminal law, constitutional law, and various other optics related to the legal profession.

Law Enforcement

The School for Law Enforcement will examine the duties, obligations, and responsibilities of being an effective law enforcement officer. Possible topics of discussion may include: specialized police units, investigative procedures, education and training of officers, identity theft, and will include a display of law enforcement equipment.

Media in Politics

The Media School will examine the influence and affect of the various media disciplines on political campaigning. How politicians manipulate the various media outlets for their benefit and the benefit of their party will be explored.

Military Service

The School for Military Service will present information on life in the military, career options, Academy applications, education options, and various other topics related to military service. This school is hosted by representatives of various branches of the U.S. Armed Forces.
